MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES

Plaintiffs bring this Motion to Stay and to Compel Alex Kwon to Submit Questions of Arbitrability to Arbitration (the “Motion”) to stay this case and compel Defendant Alex Kwon to submit his questions of arbitrability to the arbitrator in the arbitration pending in the matter Avid Holdings Ltd. f/k/a AlderEgo Group Ltd. v. Next Level Ventures, LLC, American Arbitration Association Case No. 01-23-0000-8019 (the “Arbitration”). This is an extraordinary case in which all parties seek a stay in one form or another. Plaintiffs and Mr. Kwon agree that a valid arbitration agreement exists and that the agreement delegates the “gateway” issues of arbitrability to the arbitrator. However, they dispute whether the claims against Mr. Kwon are subject to arbitration. If they are, the claims against the other defendants may be, too, under the same theories that Mr. Kwon raises. Efficiency warrants staying this case so that the arbitrator can decide these issues.

Plaintiffs Avid Holdings, Ltd., Jonathan Carfield, and Hanna Carfield are a vaporizer (“vape”) designer and manufacturer, its founder and principal, and his spouse. They brought claims against Alex Kwon, Zhao Yu, Dentons Durham Jones Pinegar P.C. (“DDJP”), Dentons US LLP (“Dentons US”), and Beijing Dacheng Law Offices, LLP (“Beijing Dacheng”) to redress a campaign of tortious activity designed to usurp the Carfields’ business and oust them from their business enterprise and the “vape” industry.

Mr. Kwon has filed a Motion to Compel Arbitration (the “Kwon Motion”),

1 and DDJP and Dentons US (together, the “Dentons Defendants”) have filed a
2 Motion to Strike and to Dismiss (the “Dentons Motion”). ECF Nos. 38 and 41.
3 Mr. Zhao and Beijing Dacheng are residents of China, and Plaintiffs are in the 4 process of seeking to have them served through the Hague Convention since they 5 have not responded to a request to waive or accept service. Under the 6 circumstances of this case, the Court should exercise its discretion to stay the case
7 on a limited basis or hold in abeyance the Kwon Motion and the Dentons Motion, 8 along with any briefing on the same, and address the threshold issue of whether the 9 Court or the arbitrator should determine whether Mr. Kwon may enforce the 10 arbitration agreement and whether the claims pleaded against him in the FAC are 11 arbitrable, which may imply a similar outcome for others before the Court. The 12 Kwon Motion reflects that Mr. Kwon and Plaintiffs agree that the Exclusive 13 Distribution Agreement (“EDA”) that Mr. Kwon argues requires arbitration of the 14 claims against him delegates to the arbitrator any questions about arbitrability, 15 including the threshold “gateway” issues of whether Mr. Kwon is entitled to 16 enforce the EDA and whether the claims pleaded against him in this Court are 17 arbitrable.
18

19 Mr. Kwon seeks to compel Plaintiffs to arbitrate their claims against him
20 pursuant to the EDA between Avid Holdings and Next Level Ventures, LLC, a 21 distribution company that Mr. Kwon formed to distribute Avid’s products.
22 Declaration of Colin R. Hagan (“Hagan Decl.”), Exhibit A. Plaintiffs have brought 23

1 the Arbitration against Next Level currently pending before the American
2 Arbitration Association. However, Plaintiffs filed the claims against Defendants in 3 this Court because none of the Defendants are signatories to the EDA (other than 4 Mr. Kwon, who signed on behalf of Next Level, not in his individual capacity) and 5 because the arbitrator has previously held “[t]o the extent the claims for defamation
6 are based upon actions of Kwon, an individual, there is no jurisdiction over Kwon, 7 a non-party to the agreement. These allegations shall remain only to the extent they 8 assert Kwon was an agent of Next Level for which it had legal liability.” Hagan
9 Decl., Exhibit B. Plaintiffs do not believe that arbitration is required. However,
10 they have expressed a willingness to consolidate these claims in the pending 11 arbitration, except that the Dentons Defendants dispute that they are subject to 12 arbitration and the position of Mr. Zhao and Beijing Dacheng is unknown.

13 Given that Mr. Kwon has raised the issue of arbitrability, there are threshold 14 questions that must be addressed regarding whether the claims against him are 15 arbitrable. The resolution of those issues may have implications for the claims 16 against the remaining defendants, including the Dentons Defendants. Plaintiffs'
17 position is that if Mr. Kwon is correct that the claims against him are subject to 18 arbitration, including under an agency theory, that same reasoning would likely 19 apply to the remaining Defendants, who are all alleged to have acted in concert in 20 their tortious conduct against the Plaintiffs.

21 The Court should stay this case, or at least hold any briefing or decision on 22

1 the Kwon Motion and the Dentons Motion in abeyance, and order Mr. Kwon to 2 raise his questions about arbitrability in the pending arbitration, in which he admits
3 that he has been “actively involved.” Plaintiffs’ Motion should be granted for four 4 reasons:

5       First, the Court has the discretion to enter a limited stay. The first factor that 6 courts generally consider is whether any party will face damage from the stay.
7 Because Mr. Kwon and the Dentons Defendants all seek a stay of this case pending 8 the outcome of the pending arbitration, a fortiori, they cannot argue that they would 9 be harmed by a limited stay of the case sufficient to determine questions of 10 arbitrability. A stay would be limited to the time sufficient for the arbitrator to 11 determine who, and what claims, belong in the arbitration.

12       Second, in contrast, the Plaintiffs face prejudice if they are required to 13 continue to expend resources in litigating in this Court if the appropriate 14 decisionmaker (the arbitrator), determines that the issues brought in this litigation 15 belong in the Arbitration pending before her. That is especially so if any of the 16 issues raised in the Kwon Motion or the Dentons Motion would have to be re-17 briefed, or if Plaintiffs have to continue to incur the costs of serving Mr. Zhao and 18 Beijing Dacheng through the Hague Convention, and bring the additional motion 19 practice that will apparently be necessary, only for the case to be moved to 20 arbitration. For example, Plaintiffs intend to seek leave to file a conspiracy claim 21 against the Dentons Defendants. In addition, it appears that Plaintiffs may need to 22
23
24
25
26
27
28

1 compel Mr. Kwon and the Dentons Defendants to participate in a conference under 2 Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(f) and complete the Joint Report required under this Court's 3 Standing Order for Newly Assigned Civil Cases. Plaintiffs seek only to proceed in 4 an orderly and efficient manner and to ensure that the correct decisionmaker is 5 deciding the issues.

7           Third, the orderly course of justice warrants a stay. The same issues that 8 would prejudice Plaintiffs absent the relief sought here also implicate the Court's 9 resources. Plaintiffs propose to have the arbitrator decide the question of whether 10 Mr. Kwon can enforce the arbitration agreement and whether the claims against 11 him are arbitrable. Depending on that decision, they may seek to compel the 12 Dentons Defendants, Mr. Zhao, and Beijing Dacheng to participate in the 13 arbitration, under the same theories that Mr. Kwon raises (if he is correct). Mr.
14 Kwon agrees that the EDA delegates questions of arbitrability to the arbitrator, but 15 has refused to cite any authority holding that the Court must first compel arbitration
16 because Mr. Kwon is not a signatory to the EDA in his individual capacity.

17           Finally, the Court should order Mr. Kwon to submit the question of whether 18 he can enforce the EDA or whether the claims against him are arbitrable to the 19 arbitrator in light of his agreement that the EDA delegates those questions. Federal 20 law addressing these issues holds that parties may delegate the threshold or 21 "gateway" issues of who, and what claims, belong in arbitration. Mr. Kwon agrees
22 that the EDA in this case does so. Decisional authority confirms that the language
23
25
26
27
28

1 in the EDA delegates those questions even as to non-signatories like Mr. Kwon.
2 The issues raised in the Kwon Motion are not contract formation issues or 3 challenges to the formation of an arbitration agreement that may be reserved for the 4 Court. If they are, deciding that issue on a preliminary basis would clarify what 5 issues need to be briefed in connection with the Kwon Motion or may limit the 6 issues that this Court needs to decide.

8 A limited stay is warranted here.

10 ARGUMENT
11

12 I. THE COURT HAS THE AUTHORITY TO STAY THE LITIGATION 13 OR BRIEFING ON THE PENDING MOTIONS TO DISMISS OR TO 14 COMPEL ARBITRATION.

15 The Court “possesses ‘inherent authority to stay federal proceedings pursuant 16 to its docket management powers.’” In re PG&E Corporation Securities 17 Litigation, 100 F.4th 1076, 1085 (9th Cir. 2024) (quoting *Ernest Bock, LLC v.
18 Steelman*, 76 F.4th 827, 842 (9th Cir. 2023)). The Court “‘may, with propriety,
19 find it is efficient for its own docket and the fairest course or the parties to enter a 20 stay of an action before it, pending resolution of independent proceedings which 21 bear upon the case.’” Id. (quoting Mediterranean Enters., Inc. v. Ssangyong Corp., 22 708 F.2d 1458, 1465 (9th Cir. 1983)).

24 The Ninth Circuit has identified the following non-exclusive factors for 25 determining whether to issue a stay: ““(1) the possible damage which may result 26 from the granting of a stay; (2) the hardship or inequity which a party may suffer in 27
28

1 being required to go forward; and (3) the orderly course of justice measured in 2 terms of the simplifying or complicating of issues, proof, and questions of law.””

4 In re PG&E Corporation Securities Litigation, 100 F.4th at 1085 (quoting Ernest
5 Bock, LLC, 76 F.4th at 842). Each of these factors warrants a limited stay in this 6 case.

7 II. A LIMITED STAY IS WARRANTED IN THIS CASE.

8       A. No Possible Damage Resulting from a Stay.

9           Mr. Kwon and the Dentons Defendants will suffer no prejudice resulting 10          from a stay. That is reflected in the fact that the Kwon Motion seeks a stay, and the 11          Dentons Defendants have indicated that they intend to seek a stay if the Court
12          denies the Dentons Motion.

13           Mr. Kwon argues that the Court should stay this case regardless of whether it 14          grants the Kwon Motion. Kwon Motion at 21-24. He argues that a stay of the 15          proceeding pending resolution of the pending arbitration “will advance ‘the orderly 16          course of justice’ by simplifying issues, evidence, and legal questions.” Kwon
17          Motion, at 23. Although the Dentons Defendants have not yet moved for a stay, 18          they have informed Plaintiffs’ counsel that “Should the Court decline to dismiss or 19          strike all of the claims against the Dentons Defendants, we intend to ask that the 20          Court stay this action pending the outcome of the pending arbitration . . . .” Hagan
21          Decl., Exhibit C.

22           Neither Mr. Kwon nor the Dentons Defendants have identified any prejudice

1 that they would suffer from staying this case or the briefing on their pending
2 motions pending a decision on the arbitrability questions, which Plaintiffs have 3 offered to brief promptly. Hagan Decl., Exhibit D.

5 Courts in this district have held that the finite duration of a stay weighs in 6 favor of granting the motion. Wolf v. Lyft, Inc., 2015 WL 4455965 (N.D. Cal. July
7 20, 2015) (citing Boise v. ACE USA, Inc., 2015 WL 4077433, at *6 (S.D. Fla. July 8 6, 2015)). That is the case here, as the threshold issue of whether the claims in the 9 FAC are arbitrable can likely be decided without undue delay.
10

11       B. Hardship or Inequity.

13       In contrast, Plaintiffs risk facing substantial hardship and inequity by having 14 to continue to expend resources litigating this case while Mr. Kwon argues that the 15 claims against him should be directed to arbitration. That is especially so if it is 16 determined that the claims are arbitrable and any of the issues must be re-briefed 17 before the arbitrator. Given that the Dentons Defendants seek to recover their 18 attorneys' fees, Plaintiff seeks to ensure that the defenses raised by the Dentons
19 Defendants are resolved by the appropriate decisionmaker so that they can 20 determine how to proceed with regard to the claims against the Dentons
21 Defendants. Plaintiffs also face the costs of service through the Hague Convention, 22 which requires translation of the FAC and related service documents, at a cost in 23 excess of $10,000 and which translation alone will take at least three weeks.
24 Plaintiffs will be prejudiced if they incur these costs only for the claims to be sent 25
26
27
28

1 to arbitration or for the case to be stayed, especially if they have to re-do any
2 translation and incur the delay required for service under the Hague Convention.

4 An orderly sequencing is likely to help avoid unnecessary costs.

5 It is notable that Defendants also seek a stay of the case, although they 6 oppose a limited stay pending resolution of threshold arbitrability issues.

8 C. Orderly Course of Justice.

9 The Kwon Motion admits that a stay pending resolution of the arbitration
10 will simplify issues, evidence, and legal questions. Kwon Motion, at 23.
11 Permitting the arbitrator to resolve questions of arbitrability before this case 12 proceeds serves the orderly course of justice.
13

14 First, as addressed below, the EDA under which Mr. Kwon seeks to compel 15 arbitration of the claims against him delegates to the arbitrator questions of who is 16 entitled to enforce the arbitration agreement against Plaintiffs. That agreement 17 further delegates to the arbitrator questions of who is entitled to enforce the 18 arbitration agreement. The limited question for this Court, if any, is whether there 19 is an applicable delegation clause that would bind Mr. Kwon, who seeks to compel
20 arbitration. Because there is such a clause, deciding the delegation question as a 21 threshold matter and directing the remaining issues of arbitrability and scope to the 22 arbitrator promotes the interests of efficiency for the parties and this Court.
23

24 Second, the arbitrator's decision as to whether the claims against Mr. Kwon
25 are arbitrable will be relevant to whether this case proceeds against the Dentons
26

1 Defendants. Plaintiffs seek to proceed efficiently, and agree that the claims should 2 be pending in as few separate proceedings as possible. If it is determined that the 3 claims against Mr. Kwon belong in arbitration, Plaintiffs submit that the claims
4 against the Dentons Defendants, Mr. Zhao, and Beijing Dacheng would also very 5 likely be arbitrable under the same arguments that Mr. Kwon raises. The law
6 recognizes that a signatory to an arbitration agreement can compel a non-signatory
7 to arbitrate under “ordinary contract and agency principles, such as ‘1) 8 incorporation by reference; 2) assumption; 3) agency; 4) veil-piercing/alter ego; and 9 5) estoppel.’’’ Amisil Holdings Ltd. v. Clarium Capital Mgmt. LLC, 622 F.Supp.2d 10 825, 830 (N.D. Cal. 2007) (quoting Comer v. Micor, Inc., 436 F.3d 1098, 1101 (9th 11 Cir. 2006)). Notably, Mr. Kwon asserts agency and estoppel theories in the Kwon 12 Motion as to why the claims against him are arbitrable. Kwon Motion, at 13-17. If 13 Mr. Kwon prevails in asserting that the claims against him are arbitrable on agency
14 or estoppel theories, Plaintiffs would likely argue that the agency argument applies 15 equally to the remaining Defendants. The FAC alleges that the Defendants acted in 16 concert to commit torts against Plaintiffs, and the agency issue is applicable to all of 17 them, if it is applicable to any of them. See, e.g., First Amended Complaint ¶¶ 6, 18 52, 55.
20 Third, addressing the issue of arbitrability first will also conserve the parties’
21 and the Court’s resources, if it is found that the claims in the FAC are arbitrable.
22 For example, as noted in the FAC, Plaintiffs intend to seek leave to plead a 23

1 conspiracy claim against the Dentons Defendants, including Beijing Dacheng, a
2 related law firm that, at the time in question, held itself out as “Dentons,” is not yet
3 before the Court. That is a motion that either may not be needed or that may need
4 to be decided by the arbitrator if the claims against the Dentons Defendants end up
5 in arbitration. In addition, it appears that Plaintiffs may need to seek to compel Mr.
6 Kwon and the Dentons Defendants to participate in a scheduling conference under 7 Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(f). Although the parties have not yet conferred about that issue
8 fully, Mr. Kwon and the Dentons Defendants have previously indicated that they do 9 not believe that such a conference is timely until all parties are served or until all 10 parties have filed answers. Hagan Decl. ¶ 20. That does not appear to comply with 11 the Court’s requirement that “[u]nless there is a likelihood that, upon motion by a 12 party, the court would order that discovery be stayed, the parties should begin to 13 propound discovery before the Scheduling Conference.” Standing Order for Civil 14 Cases § 3; see also Planned Parenthood Federation of America, Inc. v. Center for 15 Medical Progress, 890 F.3d 828, 833 (9th Cir. 2018) (holding that the California
16 procedural rule automatically staying discovery upon filing of an anti-SLAPP
17 motion does not apply in federal court, where the decision to stay discovery 18 depends on whether the motion is “founded on purely legal arguments,” in which 19 case a stay may be warranted, or “if it is a factual challenge,” in which case 20 discovery would be required).

21 Whether the parties need to confer about these issues and present additional 22

1 motions to the Court for resolution would depend on whether the claims pleaded in 2 the FAC are arbitrable against any of the Defendants. The procedural posture of 3 this case warrants a limited stay so that the parties can sort the issues of arbitrability 4 efficiently, which may limit what claims or parties remain in this litigation and 5 what motions and defenses the Court needs to decide.

8 III. THE COURT SHOULD ORDER MR. KWON TO DIRECT QUESTIONS OF ARBITRABILITY TO THE ARBITRATOR.

9 The Supreme Court has recognized that an arbitration agreement may 10 delegate to the arbitrator certain “threshold issues concerning the arbitration 11 agreement,” including “whether the parties have agreed to arbitrate or whether their 12 agreement covers a particular controversy.” Rent-A-Center, West, Inc. v. Jackson, 13 561 U.S. 63, 68 (2010); see also Coinbase, Inc. v. Suski, 602 U.S. 143, 148-149
14 (2024). In this case, Mr. Kwon (a non-signatory in his personal capacity), seeks to 15 compel Plaintiffs (only one of which is a party to the arbitration agreement) to 16 arbitrate their claims against him. The Kwon Motion admits that the EDA
17 delegates questions of arbitrability to the arbitrator, but it presents no authority why
18 that does not mean that the issues presented in the Kwon Motion should be decided 19 by the arbitrator. ECF No. 38 at 20. And Plaintiffs can locate no such authority, 20 but have found that the law suggests the contrary.
21

23 “Generally, in deciding whether to compel arbitration, a court must 24 determine two ‘gateway’ issues: (1) whether there is an agreement to arbitrate
25

1 between the parties; and (2) whether the agreement covers the dispute.” Brennan v.
2 Opus Bank, 796 F.3d 1125, 1130 (9th Cir. 2015). The Court specifically held that,
3 although these “gateway” issues are generally decided by the courts, “these 4 gateway issues can be expressly delegated to the arbitrator where ‘the parties
5 clearly and unmistakably provide otherwise.’” Id. (quoting AT&T Techs., Inc. v.
6 Commc’ns Workers of Am., 475 U.S. 643, 649 (1986)) (emphasis in Brennan); see
7 also Attia v. Oura Ring, Inc., C.A. No 23-cv-03433-HSG, 2024 WL 1382464 at *2
8 (N.D. Cal. April 1, 2024) (holding that “gateway” questions of “whether a valid
9 arbitration agreement exists between the parties, and whether the agreement covers
10 a particular controversy” can be delegated). In First Options of Chicago, Inc. v.
11 Kaplan, a case that involved questions of arbitrability applicable to non-signatories 12 like Mr. Kwon, the Supreme Court held that the question of “who – court or 13 arbitrator – has the primary authority to decide whether a party has agreed to 14 arbitrator” depends on the language of the agreement at issue. 514 U.S. 938, 943
15 (1995). Here, Plaintiffs and Mr. Kwon agree that the EDA delegates questions of 16 arbitrability to the arbitrator.
17
18 In conference, Mr. Kwon has argued that the Court must decide whether a 19 non-signatory may enforce an arbitration agreement. That is not the law. Any 20 distinction between whether the Court or the arbitrator decides these “gateway” 21 issues is generally based on the language of the agreement at issue or whether any 22 party challenges the formation of the arbitration agreement. In Kramer v. Toyota
23

1     Motor Co., the Ninth Circuit held that an arbitration clause did not reflect an intent
2     to delegate these “gateway” questions as to a non-signatory because the delegation
3     clause in the arbitration agreement at issue stated that “[e]ither you or we may 4     choose to have any dispute between you and us decided by arbitration.” 705 F.3d
5     1122, 1127 (9th Cir. 2013) (alteration in Kramer). The court explained that this 6     language “evidence[d] Plaintiffs’ intent to arbitrate arbitrability with the 7     Dealerships and no one else.” Id. Here, Mr. Kwon acknowledges that the EDA 8     that he seeks to enforce contains a delegation clause that states “[a]ny controversy 9     or claim arising out of or relating to this contract, or the breach thereof, shall be 10    settled by arbitration administered by the American Arbitration Association in 11    accordance with its Commercial Arbitration Rules, and the judgment on the award
12    rendered by the arbitrator(s) may be entered in any court having jurisdiction
13    thereof.” Hagan Decl., Exhibit A § 30; ECF No. 38 at 20-21. AAA Commercial 14    Arbitration Rule R-7(a) says: “The arbitrator shall have the power to rule on his or 15    her own jurisdiction, including any objections with respect to the existence, scope, 16    or validity of the arbitration agreement or to the arbitrability of any claim or 17    counterclaim.” Under federal law and Washington law, this language clearly and 18    unmistakably delegates the question of arbitrability to the arbitrator. Oracle
19    America, Inc. v. Myriad Group A.G., 724 F.3d 1069, 1074 (9th Cir. 2013)
20    (“Virtually every circuit to have considered the issue has determined that 21    incorporation of the [AAA] arbitration rules constitutes clear and unmistakable 22    evidence of the parties’ intent to arbitrate arbitrability.”).
23    The Court need not decide whether the delegation clause in the EDA is valid under 24    Washington law. Even if it were invalid, the arbitration provision would still be valid
25    because the arbitration provision is severable from the delegation clause.
26    The Court also need not decide whether the arbitration provision is valid under 27    Washington law. Even if it were invalid, the arbitration provision would still be valid
28    because the arbitration provision is severable from the delegation clause.

1 evidence that the parties agreed to arbitrate arbitrability.”) (alteration in Oracle).
2 The EDA “clearly and unmistakably” reflects an intent to arbitrate “[a]ny
3 controversy or claim arising out or relating to this contract,” which would include 4 the question of whether the claims in the FAC against Mr. Kwon (or any of the 5 other Defendants) are subject to arbitration. Hagan Decl., Exhibit A.

7 Mr. Kwon presents no authority holding that, under this language, the Court
8 must first determine whether he can enforce the EDA’s arbitration provision or 9 whether the claims pleaded against him in the FAC are arbitrable. Kramer
10 specifically involved the question of whether the language of the agreement
11 reflected that it intended to delegate questions of arbitrability raised by non-parties, 12 and held that it did not. 705 F.3d at 1127. In Brennan, the Ninth Circuit held that 13 the threshold, “gateway” issue of “whether there is an agreement to arbitrate 14 between the parties” may be delegated. Brennan, 796 F.3d at 1130. Courts have 15 continued to hold that an arbitration agreement can delegate to the arbitrator the 16 question of who is a party to the agreement. See Attia, 2024 WL 1382464 at *2; E
17 & E Co. v. Light in the Box Ltd., No. 15-CV-00069-EMC, 2015 WL 5915432, at *4
18 (N.D. Cal. Oct. 9, 2015) (collecting cases and holding that in arbitration provision 19 expressly applicable only to “the parties” there was “no delegation to the arbitrator 20 with respect to the issue of who is a party to the arbitration agreement in the first 21 place.”).
22

23 Courts have held that where there is no challenge to the delegation clause, 24

1 the Court's inquiry ends if the language of that delegation clause extends to 2 disputes with non-signatories. Here, no party challenges the validity of the 3 delegation clause. See ECF No. 38 at 20-21. In Rent-A-Center, the Supreme Court 4 held that if a litigant challenges the validity "of the precise agreement to arbitrate at 5 issue" under Section 2 of the Federal Arbitration Act, "the federal court must 6 consider the challenge before ordering compliance with that agreement under § 4." 7 561 U.S. at 71. The Court held that "unless [the defendant] challenged the 8 delegation provision specifically, we must treat it as valid under § 2 [of the FAA], 9 and must enforce it under §§ 3 and 4, leaving any challenge to the validity of the 10 Agreement as a whole for the arbitrator." Id. at 72; see also Caremark, LLC v.
11 Chickasaw Nation, 43 F.4th 1021, 1030 (9th Cir. 2022) (after deciding whether an 12 arbitration agreement was formed and whether there is any challenge to the 13 delegation provision, "if the parties did form an agreement to arbitrate containing 14 an enforceable delegation clause, all arguments going to the scope or enforceability 15 of the arbitration provision are for the arbitrator to decide.").
16
17 Here, there is no dispute that the EDA is a valid and binding agreement. Mr.
18 Kwon himself seeks to invoke the EDA's arbitration clause. The question whether 19 he is entitled to enforce the arbitration clause and who must decide – the Court or 20 the arbitrator – whether he is entitled to enforce the agreement. That is a question 21 of arbitrability and scope rather than an issue of whether an agreement exists.
22
23 To be sure, in Granite Rock Company v. International Brotherhood of 24
25
26
27
28

1       Teamsters, the Supreme Court clarified that parties may not delegate questions of 2 contract formation. 561 U.S. 287, 297, 299 (2010). Cases in the Ninth Circuit
3 holding that the question of whether the party seeking to enforce arbitration may do
4 so is a question for the court appear to be limited to situations where the delegation
5 clause is limited to the signatories to the agreement or whether the party resisting 6 arbitration challenges the formation of any arbitration agreement at all not just 7 whether it applies to a particular party or claim.

8                  For example, in S.T.G. by and through Garcia v. Epic Games, Inc., the court 9 held that the question of whether minor video game players had disaffirmed an 10 arbitration clause in an end-user license agreement was a “challenge that an 11 agreement to arbitrate was never formed,” under Caremark. No. 24-cv-517-RSH-
12 AHG, 2024 WL 4375782, at *5 (S.D. Cal. Oct. 2, 2024) (appeal filed). The court 13 found that it was not a challenge to formation. Id. (reasoning that “Plaintiffs do not 14 argue that disaffirmance means that they never entered into the [license agreement];
15 instead, their position is that after this lawsuit was filed, the [license agreement]
16 because ‘void ab initio’ and a ‘nullity.’”). See also Shulman v. Kaplan, No.
17 CV1905413ABFFMX, 2020 WL 2748022, at *8 (C.D. Cal. Jan. 28, 2020) (the 18 question whether a nonsignatory could compel arbitration was an issue for the 19 arbitrator based on the language of the arbitration agreement); Elias Shiber &
20 CANA, Inc. v. Have a Heart Compassion Care, Inc., No. 220CV05441SVWSHK, 21 2020 WL 8671896, at *6 (C.D. Cal. Oct. 14, 2020) (arbitrator had jurisdiction to 22
23
24
25
26
27
28 determine the threshold question of whether non-signatory was bound by arbitration agreement); Salas v. Universal Credit Servs., LLC, No. 17-CV-2352 JLS (BLM), 2019 WL 1242448, at *5 (S.D. Cal. Mar. 18, 2019) (staying case pending arbitration noting that “the arbitrator may ultimately decide that Plaintiff’s claims are not in fact subject to arbitration.”); SteppeChange LLC v. VEON Ltd., 354 F. Supp. 3d 1033, 1043 (N.D. Cal. 2018) (deferring non-signatory’s motion to compel arbitration based on language of arbitration agreement delegating questions to arbitrator). The questions at issue in the Kwon Motion are for the arbitrator to decide.

CONCLUSION

For these reasons, the Court should stay this matter, or at least stay any briefing and ruling on the Kwon Motion and Dentons Motion, for sufficient time for the arbitrator to decide the questions of arbitrability raised in the Kwon Motion and any application that decision may have as to the remaining Defendants. The Court should also order Mr. Kwon to submit those questions to the arbitrator.
